Night at the Tunnel

- One night while Tembo is asleep, his father leaves to check the lamp and asks him to stay in the hut. Like always, he goes armed with a small ax as a precaution. It may be required in case he encounters any animal and in particular the infamous "man-eater".
- The ax was a gift from his father and Baldeo feels very confident in his ability to use it. The battle inside the tunnel when he reaches the lamp, it is out and so he regains it and goes inside the tunnel to clear out any possible obstruction.
- Just when he finds the ground shaking which is due to an oncoming mud (train), as Baldeo looks in front, a tiger suddenly appears at the entrance of the tunnel and approaches him and Baldeo. Undeterred, Baldeo braces to use his ax and when the tiger attacks he evades to a side and dips his ax in the tiger's shoulder.
- This enrages the Tiger further and it attacks Baldeo again. He repeats the same move but this time the ax gets stuck in the tiger's shoulder and renders Baldeo weaponless. The tiger snatches at Baldeo with its paws and tears into him.
- After this entire scuffle, the train is almost at the tunnel. The tiger tries to get past it at the entrance but is now dead all across the train's front side as the driver finds out when he stops the train at the next station.
